Compare the 5, 10 and 15-conversation series

Series options · Pricing confirmed after scope and delivery planning

5 conversations — Test

Best for: testing whether one clearly defined audience responds before committing to more.

Includes planning, host matching, five conversations, consent-based follow-up and a report for each conversation.

Outcome: evidence of whether this audience and approach work for you.

10 conversations — Build

Best for: repeated engagement with one sector or closely related communities. Familiarity takes repetition.

Includes sequence planning, supporting communication, introduction tracking and consolidated reporting.

Outcome: steady presence and a growing record of requested introductions.

15 conversations — Sustain

Best for: several audiences, regions or hosts, with reporting across the whole programme.

Premium production, exclusivity and media rights are negotiated separately.

Outcome: sustained engagement across a broader audience strategy.

What affects cost

Venue and catering, locations, participant numbers, host and facilitator costs, content production, digital communication, safeguarding, reporting and technology.

How success is measured

Agreed before the series starts: host and session readiness; invitations; registrations and attendance; anonymous feedback; resource requests; participant-requested introductions; completed follow-up; qualified outcomes; and safeguards in place.

No prices are published here because every series is scoped to its audience and format.
